troubled with an ulcerated tooth. And yet Baron Munchausen was said to be the greatest liar the world ever saw. The average sensational newspaper nowadays could not afford to keep so comparatively truthful a man.

Gertrude Quinlan, long a factor of the Castle Square Opera Company, is credited with making a bit in "Shenandoah." Miss Quinlan is a clever and versatile woman, who deserves success.

Harrison Gray Blake, of the Mirror, and Al. Haymon, of the Spectator, trust, have both been nominated trustees of the Actors' Fund. And yet they call it cruelly to include some chickens in 5-foot pits.

Allie Gilbert, Georgia Calne, Adele Ritchie, Josephine Hall, Ada Lewis, Joe Ott, Jacques Kruger and Eddie Girard have been engaged for Koster and Bial's new review. It is hoped that their vehicle will be more meritorious than was the last.

Eugene Canfield, George Richards and Kitty Mitchell have been booked for the presentation of the new Boston review, "Around the Town," which is to be produced tomorrow. Miss Mitchell is one of the cleverest women on the vaudeville stage.

Lucy Zephie, late of "The Idol's Eye" company, has just been married. There seems to be something proverbial of hymen in Victor Herbert's opera-perhaps it is the amount of osculatory exercise in which the players are forced to indulge.

The talented Danish Sisters are shortly to appear in a sketch entitled "An Amateur Highwayman," written by a local newspaper man. Miss Edith Danish has recently been beset by a large sum of money by an uncle, but will remain on the stage.

And now Anna Held has landed San Francisco as a one-night stand. Poor "Frisco" Steve Al. Haysman began it, every crowd show that falls within its precincts begins to swear at the town. And yet "Frisco" seems to run along just the same as ever.

Lola Mora, a Spanish dancer, is being detained as a prisoner of war in Key West, having been captured on the Panama. If she was on her way to the engagements in this country her arrest and detention may be counted as one of the blessings of war.

Andrew Mack's new play, "A Ragged Earl," is by Eugene Lacy. It is reported that Joseph Humphries has been asked to write some situations and Winton Lackey claims that his comedy has supplanted several to the imperturbable author. A neat mixture, truly.

Grant Parikh will again play his time this year with the Colonial Beach Steamboat Company. He will also manage the three yachts operated by the Capital Traction Company, and expects to do quite a business during the summer in freckles and red lemonade.

Mr. and Mrs. Kendal will come over again next season and will tour the country under the management of Charles Frohman, in their success of the British province, "Not Wisely, But Too Well." It is to be hoped that the co-stars will not think bitterly of the appropriateness of that title when it is too late.

At a special meeting of the National Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees, Mr. A. T. Phillips, of the Grand Opera House, was elected a delegate to the annual convention, which takes place next July, in Omaha. Mr. Phillips is one of the most able stage carpenters in the business and his election was not at all unexpected.

Martha Morton, Al Candy, J. M. Baben, Mr. and Mrs. Augustus Cramer, Annie Buckley, Reginald D. Koven, Helen Buckley and Hilda Clark are the latest recruits for a vacation abroad. There are many other entries who will probably spend the hot months on top of some convenient flat acquiring a fashionable tan.

Some one should prepare a table of space to be gotten from the newspapers by volunteering for the present war with Spain. Some of the New York dailies seem to have generously offered to hold a column for every player who will enlist. A number accepted last week, and as a result we are hearing of "celebrated actors" we never knew about before. Who says the international trouble does not develop a country's resources?

Correct Time of Manila.
(From the Baltimore Sun.)

Since the battle of Manila Bay there have appeared many conflicting and confusing statements regarding the difference in time between the Philippines and the United States. Some of the statements have been most extravagant and far-fetched.

Dr. Charles Lane Poor, astronomer of the Johns Hopkins University, says that Manila time is ahead of Washington by 12 hours, 12 minutes and 2 seconds. His authority for this statement is the "American Ephemeris and Nautical Almanac," for 1898, published by the Government. The same authority says that Hong Kong time is 12 hours, 44 minutes and 51 seconds ahead of Washington, or about 25 minutes slower than that of Manila.

The point at which a new day begins, according to Dr. Poor, is on the meridian which is 180 degrees from Greenwich, or half way around the globe from the English observatory, which governs time and geographical measurements. There are, however, a few local departures from this rule on some of the small islands of the Pacific.

According to these facts when it was 6 a. m. on an eventful Sunday in Manila, it was 128 p. m. Saturday in Washington. Those statements of Dr. Poor dispose of four erroneous assertions which have crept into various newspaper articles. They are:

First—That Manila time is eleven hours behind or later than that of Washington. Instead, it is thirteen hours ahead.

Second—That the imaginary line, which marks the beginning of a new day is an irregular one in the Pacific Ocean very near the eastern coast of Asia. Instead it follows closely the 180th meridian.

Third—That this line for a new day was so irregular in circling around the Philippines as to make Hong Kong time a day ahead of that of Manila, though but six hundred miles away. Instead, the actual difference is a matter of a half hour, and the same day rules in both places.

Fourth—That because of this last assertion the battle of Manila Bay was really fought on Saturday, according to Manila time, though the news of it reached Europe and America on Sunday. Dewey fought on Sunday, May 1, Manila time, not on Saturday, April 30, Manila time, though it was Saturday in Washington at the time. It is a date so momentous in American historical calendars that it is a shame to have it thus obscured by misstatements and illogical reasoning.

A Disappointed Patriot.
(From the Atlanta Constitution.)

The cross-roads inhabitant didn't know the war was going on. For the first time in five years, accompanied by his wife, he had driven to town in the ox cart, and was "doin' some tradin'" in the village store when a regiment of soldiers filed past.

"Hello!" he shouted "what's up?" "We're fightin' Spain, now," explained the storekeeper.

"Fighin' Spain?" "That's what!"

He rushed to the door and craning his neck far out, cried, excitedly:

"Turned of they ain't goin' to fight somebody? Yander's Mart' Wilkins, an' Joe Scruggs, an'—Lord bless me!—if thar ain't 'War' Williams, that I fit with in Virginny! Gimme my gun!"

"Turn this here new order of things!" he growled, as he joined his wife. "They wuz glad enough to git me when Lee wuz in the field, but a old veteran don't stand no chance now!"
